SUNDAY SPORTS BILL IN THE SENATE FOR FIRST READING

Amended Bill to Be Read to Members of Senate
Today

MANY CHANGES MADE

Schwartz Bill Before Committee
For the Past Four Weeks

By William J. Kelly
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, Mar. 1.—(INS)—The House blue law modifier, legalizing Sunday outdoor sports, and legislation for a constitutional convention to pass upon proposed repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment shared the spotlight in the Senate today as the two amended bills came up for first reading.

Both measures emerged from committee considerably changed. Advocates of the two proposals, the Schwartz sports bill and the McClure convention bill, anticipated no trouble in obtaining favorable action on first reading. The baseball measure, barring delays, could be passed finally in the Senate and the House could concur in the amendments next Tuesday.—If the bill is to be passed. Final decision would then rest with the Governor.

The Schwartz bill makes its appearance on the Senate calendar after spending approximately four weeks in the law and order committee. Liberals found their cause advanced another notch as a result. Two years ago a similar measure never came out of Senate Committee. In its present form, the Schwartz bill provides for outdoor sports on Sundays, except boxing and wrestling, between 2 and 6 p. m. under a license system.

On the second heading calendar of the House today was another and more sweeping blue law modifier, the Steedle bill, which would permit movies and other amusements on the Sabbath.

After licenses are issued under the Schwartz bill, opponents could resort to a referendum for local repeal of the licensing ordinances.

The amendments made by the Senate committee provide for a license for all games whether or not admission is charged, although the fee would be only $1 where there is no admission. This provision is viewed as overcoming the possibility of quasi-amateur games which might otherwise be held without admission charges but could be financed by other methods such as "passing the hat" and selling programs. In effect, all local communities opposed to Sunday sports could prevent all games by refusing to issue licenses.

The license fees would not be in excess of $100 for Philadelphia and Pittsburgh; $50 for Scranton and third class cities, and $25 for boroughs and townships. The fee revenue would go into the municipal treasuries.

As a result of amendments to the McClure convention bill, considerable doubt surrounds the results which would be produced in the election of delegates. As originally introduced, the bill called for two classes of delegates, "wet" and "dry." One amendment provides for a "non-committal" or "uninstructed" class of delegates who would be candidates at large without pledges to either side of the prohibition cause.

The total number of "at large" delegates elected would be 17 instead of 33. According to the way the people voted, these 17 might be split into wet, dry, and "doubtful" or uninstructed classes. Each of the 34 Congressional districts would also elect one delegate who is either wet or dry, making a total of 51 votes in the convention.

They could be elected at any time specified by the Governor and the convention would assemble 28 days after the election.

TEN IN PRISON
Philadelphia, Mar. 1.—Ten members of the $5,000,000 Hilton rum ring, found guilty by a jury in the U. S. District Court last night, as an aftermath of a four weeks' trial, today were in Moyamensing prison pending arguments on a motion for a new trial next Monday. After deliberating but two hours and twenty-eight minutes, the jury found the defendants guilty of conspiracy, to violate the prohibition, radio and internal revenue laws of the nation. Judge George A. Welsh immediately committed the men to jail without bail.

The Court also ordered four of the other twenty-four members of the ring who pleaded guilty, sent to prison pending sentences. The action indicates that the 14 will receive prison terms. The maximum sentence for conspiracy is two years.

Special Deputy Attorney General Sheet A. Keys, who prosecuted the case agreed that the remaining twenty men, salesmen for the syndicate, will be fined and released on probation.

After the jury announced its verdict, Keys tossed a bomb shell into the case by revealing that some of the defendants who pleaded guilty had continued selling liquor. "Even up to two hours ago, one of them delivered a supply of liquor," the prosecutor charged.

VISITOR TO DOORN MAY GET SPLINTER SOUVENIR

If Lucky May Secure Such
From Woodpile of The Ex-Kaiser

CHOPS IN SECLUSION

(This is the second in a series of six articles by Edward Hunter, International News Service staff correspondent, describing the life of the former Kaiser of Germany at his "stage" court in Doorn castle.)

By Edward Hunter
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

DOORN, Holland, Mar. 1.—Visitors to Doorn, if lucky, are sometimes able to catch sight of the ex-kaiser himself sawing a tree. If luckier still, they might receive a splinter of the tree as a souvenir, to keep as a family heirloom. But only rare individuals merit such glory.

But it is not so easy anymore to see the ex-kaiser at work at Doorn. I was shown a grove of trees in the castle grounds where he often takes his exercise. But now the ex-sovereign prefers to go to the estate of a titled friend at Amerongen, about 20 minutes away by car, where he first went on his flight from Germany. There, secluded by a high wall, he can do his sawing free from trespassing eyes.

That is the atmosphere of Doorn Castle. Every fifteen minutes you can hear the chimes at Doorn. They emanate from the clock tower adjoining his castle, the large timepiece a gift from the ex-sovereign on his birthday to the kaiserin and their children.

Between the castle itself and the clock-tower, but outside of the most surrounding the ex-kaiser's residence, is the modest visitor's quarters, where the crown prince and a few favored guests stay while at Doorn. Others have to be content with the Dutch inns when they are invited for a visit by the former ruler.

Near the center of the palace grounds is a building housing a bazaar conducted by the ex-kaiser's consort, Princess Hermine von Schomberg-Carolath. She maintains this sale for the benefit of the poor wives and children of German nobility and of deceased army officers of society rank.

Not everybody is permitted to contribute, for only the chosen are able to attain the social distinction of entering the imperial precincts of this bazaar. Once within, however, it looks very much like an ordinary woman's club sale in any small town in America.

But here more of the atmosphere peculiar to Doorn Castle is to be absorbed. One of the centrally-located tables in the barn-like structure contains photographs of the imperial family, principally of the ex-kaiser himself, and of Princess Hermine, the royal patroness.

Some of these portraits are signed by the imperial couple. The ex-kaiser's signature is written with a clear, firm hand, and the initials "R. F." are to be found inside the loop formed by a brave flourish of the pen. "R. F." means "King of the Franks," and these were the tribes which later split up into France, Germany and Italy.

It is to be doubted, however, whether even the ex-kaiser takes the "R. F." seriously.

There aren't only photographs of the former ruler, however. There are numerous books on sale, too, either written by or about the ex-kaiser, and for a change there are clay statuettes and busts of the imperial refugee. (Continued on Page 6)

HENRY W. WATSON IS HEAD OF HOUSE GROUP

Veteran Bucks Countian Is Selected at Caucus Held
In Washington

LONG A MEMBER

WASHINGTON, Mar. 1.—Pennsylvania Republican members of the next House caucused yesterday and elected the veteran Henry W. Watson, of Langhorne, their chairman. Representative McFadden, of Canton, was neither present nor invited.

McFadden's absence renewed speculation among members of the delegation as to whether the fiery opponent of the Hoover Administration's fiscal policies would retain his place in the next House as ranking Republican on the Banking and Currency Committee.

The day the McFadden resolution to impeach President Hoover was killed in the House, the Pennsylvania Republicans dismissed him as their secretary and ordered Representative Swick, of Beaver Falls, the new secretary, not to invite McFadden to future caucuses.

The move was interpreted by most of the Pennsylvanians as meaning the delegation had read McFadden out of the Republican party as far as the delegation was concerned.

McFadden's fate as to committee assignments lies largely in the hands of Representative Darrow, of Philadelphia, re-elected to the Committee on Committees.

With twenty-three votes in his pocket, Darrow will control about one-fifth of the voting strength of the committee which selects Republican committee members.

Darrow has refused to say how he stands on the McFadden question. At his mention today he smiled.

McFadden expressed surprise when told there had been a Pennsylvania caucus.

"I am a Republican and I am from Pennsylvania," he commented. "In the future when I hear there will be a meeting of Pennsylvania Republicans, I shall go—if I am interested in whatever is to come before the meeting."

Watson, who came to the House at the same time as Darrow and McFadden in 1915, said he didn't know that any effort would be made to keep McFadden out of caucuses.

"If he wants to come I suppose he can," Watson said.

The caucus transacted no business other than election of officers. Representative Swick was elected secretary and Representative Wolfenden, of Upper Merion, was named to the Congressional committee.

McFadden, a banker by profession, has been a member of the Banking and Currency Committee since he first entered the House. He was its chairman from 1919 until the Democrats organized the House in 1931.

Watson has been noted as an advocate of protective tariff on the Ways and Means Committee.

Darrow, in co-operation with Representative Snell, of New York, Republican floor leader, has been a member of the Steering Committee and is generally recognized leader of the Pennsylvania Republicans.

JUDGE KNIGHT SPEAKER

NEWTOWN, Mar. 1.—The Lenten meetings for men, which have been an important religious feature in Newtown for more than a quarter of a century, will open the series for this year on Sunday afternoon, in Arcade Hall.

The speaker at the first meeting will be Hon. Harold G. Knight, judge of the Montgomery county courts, who has spoken at the meetings in previous years, and always has a message for his hearers.

The musical features will include orchestral numbers and selections by a men's chorus.

Evan T. Worthington, minister of the Society of Friends, is chairman of the meetings this year, and the pastors of the various Protestant churches will co-operate in the services.

The hour has been set at 3 o'clock, for the accommodation of many from the country districts who attend the meetings each year.

Ash Wednesday, Today, Is Beginning of Lenten Season

Ash Wednesday, which is being observed today, brings in the Lenten season.

The period of Lent is marked by all Christian Churches, and many in this section plan for special services throughout the period which ends with Easter.

Worshippers in Catholic edifices today are reminded that man is but ashes and to ashes must return. The worshippers, upon approaching the altar have the sign of the cross made by the priest upon their foreheads, ashes being used.

Certain rites are being observed by several denominations in this section today, and special Lenten devotional services will continue throughout the Lenten season. Lent is devoted by worshippers to a thorough self-examination, fervent public and private prayer, and a strengthening of the spiritual life.

NO CHANGE MADE IN BANKING METHODS HERE

Business Being Transacted As Usual by Both Institutions

ALL DEPOSITS ARE SAFE

Pennsylvania, through its Legislative bodies, on Monday night, followed action taken by mid-western and a number of eastern states to protect their banking interests from unusual and unwarranted demands.

The resolution is available to those banks which consider it necessary to take advantage of such protection. It does not, however, apply to many of our banks as they are, like our two Bristol institutions, in an impregnable financial condition.

Local depositors need have no fears awakened by conditions which do not exist here.

No changes have been made by the local banks in the transaction of their business.

Freihofer Will Give Jig-Saw Puzzles Free

The amazing Jig Saw Puzzle craze which is sweeping the country will be given added impetus in this section, beginning today. Announcement has been made by the William Freihofer Baking Company that they are sponsoring an educational campaign among children, based on stressing the health value of wheat and milk, and offering Jig-Saw Puzzles as prizes for the best letters. Each day 300 Jig-Saw Puzzles will be given to the winners. The puzzles are in 200 pieces, with several children's designs, attractively boxed and gaily colored.

This is what the boys and girls must do. Just write a letter, or post card, telling in their own way, "Why Milk and Wheat Are Good for Health." The judges are not interested in spelling, handwriting or English, so even the tiniest tot has a chance to win. Mothers and fathers can help by telling the children all they know about milk and wheat. Letters should be addressed to Freihofer's Jig-Saw Puzzle Contest, Pennington Avenue and Willow Street, Trenton, N. J.

Around every Freihofer Perfect Loaf is a special paper band giving many interesting and helpful facts on "Why Wheat and Milk are Good for Health." All grocers carry the Freihofer Perfect Loaf, and the information on the band will take the boys and girls a long way toward winning a prize. But, it is not necessary to buy the Perfect Loaf, if you think you can get along without it.

JUSTICE MOORE FILES A MOTION FOR NEW TRIAL

Justice of Peace Found Guilty
Of Two Charges
Yesterday

"OFFENSE IS SERIOUS"

District Attorney Scores Member of Minor Judiciary
For His Actions

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 1.—Deliberating but fifteen minutes, a jury in the criminal court of Bucks county yesterday afternoon convicted Justice of the Peace Norman H. Moore, Langhorne Manor, of forcible entry and malicious mischief.

Moore, who is 29, claims that he has been "framed" by bootleg interests. Through his attorney, Webster S. Achey, of Doylestown, a motion for a new trial has been filed and Moore was released under bail.

In his address to the jury, District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn said that in his opinion the Moore case was the most important case that has been tried in Bucks county for many years.

"The offense in itself is serious enough, but it is made doubly important to you to act upon because of the fact that it was committed by a member of the minor judiciary of Bucks county," Mr. Eastburn argued in his opening remarks.

Justice of the Peace Moore, the Commonwealth charged, forced his way into the apartment of Mrs. Mary Crawford, South Langhorne, by breaking the glass in a rear door, opening the lock and walking in, at 4.30 on the morning of January 1, after he had been drinking beer and highballs at the Campus Inn, South Langhorne, that had been raided by state police.

"Will the officials and citizens of Bucks county allow a man of this type to get away with a thing like this," Mr. Eastburn continued in his remarks to the jury. "A man who has been honored by his own fellow-citizens in his home town. When we learned what had happened in this case, we insisted that he be tried in this court."

"And in answer to remarks by defense counsel in his speech to the jury that if all the Justices of the Peace in Bucks county who drink beer in road houses at night were brought into court, the courts would be very busy. I will say that if all the Justices of the Peace in Bucks county who drink beer at night in road houses, and then follow it up by breaking into a woman's apartment, they will get exactly the same dose as Norman H. Moore. He is going to get today, if they are brought into court."

"One way, ladies and gentlemen of the jury, that you can put a stop to this course of conduct on the part of an official, is to find him guilty of the offenses of which he is charged. What action will follow, you need not concern yourself about."

In charging the jury, Judge Calvin S. Boyer, explained the law in the case and made it plain that "it makes no difference who brought the prosecution in this case, why it was brought and when; that if they found the defendant committed the crime as the Commonwealth witnesses testified, he must be found guilty."

"There has been much collateral testimony in this case that had nothing to do directly with the offense charged," Judge Boyer said, "and you are not to allow that to guide you in deciding the real facts in the case. This is not a difficult case to decide and the Court does not think that it will take you very long to come to an agreement."

During the trial of the case, District Attorney Eastburn was called as a witness by the defense for cross-examination, and asked what conversation he had had with Moore some time after this affair happened. Mr. Eastburn testified he summoned Moore to his office "on important business" and that when he arrived, after discussing details of the case, that he suggested to him that he resign as Justice of the Peace because he had affidavits in his possession that made him of the opinion that Moore's conduct was unbecoming that of an officer of the county. Moore, at the time, told Mr. Eastburn, that he thought himself that it was the proper thing for him to do and that he would resign immediately.

Yesterday on the stand, Moore testified that he has not resigned his office, and that he "did not want to be a burnt offering for the beer runners of Bucks County."

THE SIMPLER LIFE

Homey and inexpensive pleasures occupy the evenings of the great American family this winter as they were not wont to do in the jazzed-up days of prosperity. Jigsaw puzzles, bridge and anagrams have supplanted the theater and night club. Some persons see in this one of the real benefits of hard times.

Skilled amateurs and hardy novices are now playing the gardener's mid-winter version of the crossword or jigsaw puzzle with a pile of recently published seed annuals and a diagram of the backyard garden plot.

Amateur gardeners are showing the same trend toward sa'nds and pot herbs that is found in commercial gardening. They have felt the influence of the swift rise to fame of the green leaf vitamins.

There is that most maligned of vegetables, spinach. With all the world turning up its nose the commercial crop increased from $1,715,869 to $7,500,000 in the last 10 years. Lettuce now has an annual market value of more than $30,000,000.

Sophisticated gardeners are going in more and more for less familiar sa'nd crops long favored in the Old World. That once noxious weed, the dandelion, is being carefully cultivated.

Hard times have not encouraged as much backyard gardening as was predicted because the efficiency of commercial growers places all the common vegetables on the market for less than it costs the amateur to raise them.

UNCLE SAM'S PART

Should the United States win any concessions at the world economic conference it will pay dearly for them or some well-laid plans of the other powers must go astray. The order of business for the conference reads like a challenge to the United States; all the major proposals run counter to our traditional views and practices and to public opinion—with one exception.

So little is asked of America. Merely that Uncle Sam freely and cordially part with much of his monetary gold stock, substantially forget the war debts, welcome all imports, lend more money to the rest of the world and lower the tariff.

In exchange for these pinnacles the other powers will see what they can do about the world-wide resumption of the gold standard and about stabilizing international trade and finance.

Essentially, this means that the United States must choose between world economy or nationalistic economy; between following the normal course of a creditor nation or striving toward economic self-sufficiency.

The American policy toward imports, if carried to its logical conclusion, would permit exporting for monetary consideration only—all imports being barred. This policy the other nations now contend is incompatible with the restoration of the gold standard.

Should Washington ever come to the same conclusion it will come from economic necessity, not because of some convincing speeches at a world conference.

SYNOPSIS

Tom Leach, pirate terror of the Spanish Main and master of the dread "Black Swan," captures the merchant vessel "The Centaur," bound for England, and kills the captain and crew. Passengers aboard the "Centaur" are Priscilla Harradine, lovely, young daughter of the late Captain-General of the Leeward Isles; Major Sands, her father's elderly aide, who hopes to win her hand and fortune; and the handsome young Frenchman, Charles de Bernis, former lieutenant of the buccaner, Henry Morgan. The latter reformed and is commissioned by the King of England to rid the seas of pirates. He has tried in vain to capture the elusive Leach, De Bernis, known to Leach of old, protects Priscilla by introducing her as his wife, and the Major, as his brother-in-law. He holds Leach at bay with a promise of great wealth in the form of a Spanish plate fleet scheduled to sail shortly. It is agreed that De Bernis will take command of the "Centaur" and lead Leach to the treasure. The pirate chief reluctantly agrees to De Bernis' suggestion that they career Leach's vessel, "The Black Swan," to put it in battle order for their coming encounter with the Spaniards. Leach holds his anger towards De Bernis in check, waiting until the treasure is in his hands. Despite the fact that he owes his life to De Bernis, Major Sands is hostile towards the Frenchman, feeling superior to him. When Priscilla reprimands him for his apparent ingratitude, he explains it is due to his concern for her safety. To Priscilla's question as to why he became a buccaner, De Bernis explains how the persecution of the Huguenots in France caused him to flee to Santa Catalina and join his uncle, Sieur Simon. Friendless, when his uncle was killed, he had no alternative but to join Morgan. When the Major rebukes De Bernis for being a buccaner, the Frenchman retaliates with "You, at least, should regard it extremely fortunate."

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

The Major had no answer for that. His look was foolish, and he reserved his comments upon what the Frenchman had told them until Monsieur de Bernis had gone down to the quarter-deck, where Halliwell stood taking the height of the sun.

"Morgan's trust in him hasn't prevented him from betraying it so as to return to piracy," the Major condemned him.

But Miss Priscilla, wistfully pensive, either did not hear or did not heed him, for she made no answer. And the Major, remembering in time how the topic of Monsieur de Bernis invariably now led to the frontiers of acrimony, did not pursue the subject.

But he returned to it more than once before they reached the Albuquergues. His scorn of De Bernis was stimulated by that man's free-and-easy association with the ruffians who made up the crew, a matter to which he missed no opportunity of drawing Miss Priscilla's attention, so as to justify himself in her eyes for the feelings she was disposed to condemn in him.

That night when on the fore-castle, under the new moon, De Bernis was singing to his audience of pirates, the Major and the lady were enjoying the cool on the poop. Across the length of the ship floated that mellow, moving baritone voice.

"It passes belief," said the Major, in tones of disgust, "that a man should make so free with a gang of cut-throats. Stab me, it does!"

He never knew whether Priscilla's words were intended for an answer.

At last, on the Sunday, they threaded the channel that ran among the islands of the Albuquergues group, and dropped anchor in ten fathoms, in the wide basin of the lagoon on the eastern side of Maldiva, the northernmost of the keys. It was this, which, at the instances of de Bernis, had been selected for the careening of the Black Swan.

The cove was as secret and sheltered a place as he had represented it, and in every particular Leach was compelled to admit that it could not be better suited to the purpose for which they came.

The lagoon was a pear-shaped basin, narrowing at the neck, between a reef that fringed the southern half of its sweep and a considerable scrub-crowned bluff that screened it from the north. Scattered on the heights of this bluff and it offered a fine emplacement for guns to defend the entrance. Leach, however, without experience of fortifications and of fighting on land, gave no thought to these possibilities, and de Bernis did not appear to be disposed to school him in them.

The half-moon of beach, running from bluff to reef, shelved so gradually that the anchorage was four or five cable's length from high-water mark. This beach was divided near the bluff by a freshwater stream of considerable proportions for so small an island. At the summit of this beach, which was wide and very silvery and along which turtles scuttled clumsily when the clatter of the anchor chains came to disturb them, rose a green wall of palm and pimento, and the air was heavily fragrant with the scent of spices, which the hot sun was drawing from the trees. The island, less than a mile in width and little more than two miles long, was densely wooded from end to end.

The two ships having come to anchor side by side, Leach lost no time. The boats were lowered from both of them, and men went ashore to fell timber for the building of stout rafts required for the work of lightening the Black Swan. This lightning occupied a full three days, in which time she was completely dismantled of all save her masts. Not only her forty ponderous guns, but everything else moveable, or that could be rendered moveable, went over the side, to be floated ashore on the rafts. Finally, eased of her ballast, she was ready to careen.

The work was merrily and briskly conducted by those lawless men. They brought to it a school-boy zest. Seeing them wading to their armpits to receive and draw ashore the heavily laden rafts, maintaining the while a running fire of jest and laughter, like honest, care-free laborers, it was difficult to believe them men of blood and violence, predatory and ruthless, holding life as cheap as honour.

When at last the Black Swan was ready for beaching, the two hundred and fifty men who now composed her crew set about preparing themselves quarters ashore. There was more felling of trees to provide poles for the vast sailcloth pavilions which they erected along the summit of the beach in the neighbourhood of the fresh water. For their captain and his officers they built with incredible rapidity a roomy log hut thatched with palmetto; and they fitted it with hammocks and furnished it with tables and chairs that had been taken from the ship. And whilst the main body, industrious as a colony of ants, were about these operations, others were at work at the boucan fires which they had lighted and over which they were curing the turtles which they had caught.

At last, as the short Caribbean tide began to flow on the morning

HOLLYWOOD.—This year should see the reinstatement of Nils Asther as a romantic favorite.

Cruelly frozen out by the talkies, the tall Swedish star has mastered English and is down on the books for some really important pictures. He will take a lead role in "Rhapsody," a Hungarian play which Lucien Hubbard will make into his second picture for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Cast as a dashing Hungarian officer of post-war times, Nils will don uniforms even more striking than in "The Bitter Tea of General Yen." With his new confidence, he should emerge from this picture well on the way up to his former eminence.

Those who know him best tell you that Nils is a shy fellow, who would be better off if he knew how to assume more Hollywood front. He mixes very little socially, preferring a quiet life with a good deal of time devoted to horseback riding and gymnastics.

Roosevelt Names The Official White House Staff

By Louis B. Gorton
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

All of the seasoned "oldtimers" who have weathered the change of administration after a long period of administration will conduct President-elect Roosevelt's business in the White House executive offices after March 1. This was assured today with announcement by Mr. Roosevelt of his official White House set-up.

Louis McHenry Howe, of Massachusetts, is to be the new President's chief secretary.

Marvin Hunter McIntyre, of Kentucky, is to be the secretary who will occupy the big office next to Mr. Roosevelt's, receive all callers and arrange engagements.

Stephen T. Early, of Virginia, is to be the secretary in charge of press relations and travel arrangements.

Marguerite Lehman, of New York, will continue as private secretary—a capacity she has held since 1920.

The office of literary assistant to the President, now held by French Strother, under President Hoover, is to be abolished in the next administration.

Otherwise, there will be few changes around the executive offices. The familiar faces that visitors from all sections of the country have been seeing for years in connection with their White House business will still be on the job after next Saturday. There will be virtually no displacements in the staff room.

"Pat" McKenna, the glib-tongued Irishman who has been doorkeeper of the executive offices since the Theodore Roosevelt administration will still be behind his front desk next Monday.

Irwin H. "Ike" Hoover, the chief usher who came to the White House in the Harrison administration as the electrician who installed the first lights, will still be guiding visitors and guests in and out of the executive mansion proper.

Two old employees of the Roosevelt administration are going to make the journey to Washington, however. They are Elizabeth, the cook, and Katy, the maid, both colored, who have been with the family during Mr. Roosevelt's two terms as Governor of New York.

Howe, the chief secretary of the new regime, began newspaper work with his father by helping run one in Upper New York State. He migrated to the old New York Herald as a political reporter, became attached to Mr. Roosevelt and has remained so in a confidential capacity for years.

McIntyre got his early newspaper training in Louisville, Ky., and Asheville, N. C., and then became city editor of the Washington, D. C., Times. During and after the war he was special assistant to the Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels, and during the Republican administration he was identified with the motion picture industry.

Early was the Associated Press correspondent who accompanied Mr. Roosevelt in 1920 when he was the Democratic vice-presidential nominee. Later, he, too, became identified with the motion picture industry. He is a collateral descendant of General Jubal Early, confederate officer of Civil War fame.

Lady Nancy Astor May Rule British Embassy at Capital

Rumor Says Viscount Astor, Son of American Parents, May Succeed Lindsay as British Envoy to Washington After Roosevelt Inauguration.

LADY NANCY ASTOR WITH PRES-ELECT ROOSEVELT

It rumormongers, does not lie, Great Britain will soon make one of the smartest moves of her diplomatic history. Appointing Viscount Astor to succeed Sir Ronald Lindsay as British Ambassador to Washington. Despite his title, the Viscount's blood is one hundred per cent pure American, and it is an undisputed fact that blood is thicker than water—something that John Bull might take into account now that existing relations between Washington and London resemble those between farmer and mortgage holder, thanks to the debt question. The Viscount is the son of the late William Waldorf Astor, of New York, and the former Mary Dahlgren, of Philadelphia. The elder Astor was created an English Baronet in 1916 and raised to Viscount in 1917, sacrificing his American citizenship in the process. The present Viscount succeeded to the title on the death of his father in 1919. In the event of the Viscount receiving the embassy appointment, his wife, Lady Nancy Astor, would be a brilliant addition to the diplomatic social set in the capital. Renowned all the world over for her wit and keen mind, Lady Astor would also be a valuable asset to John Bull as embassy hostess. It has been said, whether or not with truth, that more international questions are settled at diplomatic house parties than are aired on the floor of Congress. As Lady Astor is a born politician, a seasoned campaigner, and holding the distinction of being the first woman ever to sit in the British House of Commons, her importance as an embassy lady can not be overemphasized. Lady Astor has also the advantage of being a close friend of President-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt, whom she visited on her recent stay in the United States.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 1, 1933

THE SIMPLER LIFE

Homey and inexpensive pleasures occupy the evenings of the great American family this winter as they were not wont to do in the jazzed-up days of prosperity. Jigsaw puzzles, bridge and anagrams have supplanted the theater and night club. Some persons see in this one of the real benefits of hard times.

Skilled amateurs and hardy novices are now playing the gardener's mid-winter version of the crossword or jigsaw puzzle with a pile of recently published seed annals and a diagram of the backyard garden plot.

Amateur gardeners are showing the same trend toward sa'ads and pot herbs that is found in commercial gardening. They have felt the influence of the swift rise to fame of the green leaf vitamins.

There is that most maligned of vegetables, spinach. With all the world turning up its nose the commercial crop increased from $1,715,860 to $7,500,000 in the last 10 years. Lettuce now has an annual market value of more than $30,000,000.

Sophisticated gardeners are going in more and more for less familiar sa'ad crops long favored in the Old World. That once noxious weed, the dandelion, is being carefully cultivated.

Hard times have not encouraged as much backyard gardening as was predicted because the efficiency of commercial growers places all the common vegetables on the market for less than it costs the amateur to raise them.

UNCLE SAM'S PART

Should the United States win any concessions at the world economic conference it will pay dearly for them or some well-laid plans of the other powers must go astray. The order of business for the conference reads like a challenge to the United States; all the major proposals run counter to our traditional views and practices and to public opinion—with one exception.

So little is asked of America. Merely that Uncle Sam freely and cordially part with much of his monetary gold stock, substantially forget the war debts, welcome all imports, lend more money to the rest of the world and lower the tariff.

In exchange for these pittance the other powers will see what they can do about the world-wide resumption of the gold standard and about stabilizing international trade and finance.

Essentially, this means that the United States must choose between world economy or nationalistic economy; between following the normal course of a creditor nation or striving toward economic self-sufficiency.

The American policy toward imports, if carried to its logical conclusion, would permit exporting for monetary consideration only—all imports being barred. This policy the other nations now contend is incompatible with the restoration of the gold standard.

Should Washington ever come to the same conclusion it will be for economic necessity, not because some convincing speeches at a world conference.

Since his separation from Vivian Duncan, the gossips haven't tabbed him once with another woman.

All the out-of-work actors in Hollywood want to stampee to radio work. El Brendel has a friend who goes on the air every morning at 7:30.

"What on earth do you do then?" El asked him.

"Tell bedtime stories for night-watchmen," was the acid reply.

There is one story, though, that'd like to tell you.

Is about a woman, a story of high courage in the face of misfortune.

The heroine is Mrs. Harold Lockwood.

Any of you with a knowledge of motion picture background will remember Harold Lockwood. When Mary Pickford was just beginning 'o be known as "America's Sweetheart," when Eugene O'Brien was a rising matinee idol, when President Wilson was in his first term at the White House, when hobble skirts were drawing tirades from the cloth manufacturers and when war clouds were ready to sweep over Europe, Harold Lockwood was a great star.

Today his widow is a make-up woman.

She isn't even a regular studio make-up woman. Calls for her come only when casts are so large that the regular staff have to call in outside assistance. The other day on the Wheeler-Woolsey set at R-K-O was the first time she had worked since December.

Yet, in spite of all the bitter breaks Hollywood has handed her, this woman carries on. Her smile is an armor against pity.

Maybe, some day, when Harold Jr. gets out of secretarial school, she can take it easy.

But there's the meanwhile. How about it, Hollywood?

HOLLYWOOD PARADE.

It's au revoir for the Culbertsons next Saturday. The bridge expert, who called Hollywood names and then wouldn't back it up, is expected to finish his sixth short (he calls them featurettes) some time in the latter part of the week.

Trust Clara Bow to go the other stars one better. They adopt one baby and she takes on two 10-year-old cousins.

The actor playing the butler in "Supernatural" is the uncle and adopted father of poor Peg Entwistle. . . . Quite ambitious is Central City in Denver. It wants Charlie Chaplin to play "Hamlet" there next summer. Also Helen Freeman for the same production.

. . . They'll tell you that the status of Marlene Dietrich for "Song of Songs" is insured for $10,000. . . . Betty Furness and Dorothy Wilson have new long term contracts at R-K-O. They are among the very few survivors of this studio's big drive for young players. . . . Did you hear Shirley Grey's real name?—Agnes Zetterstrand. . . . And, in answer to several queries, Jack La Rue, the actor who supplanted George Raft in "The Story of Temple Drake," is not married. . . . What other gossip is there? In the words of Clarence Marks, it's so quiet around Hollywood today, you can hear an option drop.

Washington Letter

By George R. Holmes
(U. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 1.—(INS)—Both the Senate and the House are going to have new "deans" after March 4th.

Senator William E. Borah of Idaho becomes the senior member of the upper chamber. Whatever solace there may be in this unofficial office can hardly compensate the Idahoan, however, for the loss of his Foreign Relations Committee chairmanship.

Borah succeeds to the deanship because of the defeat in November of the veteran Reed Smoot of Utah. Smoot retires 30 years to the day from the time he first entered the Senate.

Many things have happened in 30 years. It seems strange now to recall that a savage fight was made against Smoot's being seated back in 1903 merely because he was a Mormon.

In the House, Rep. Gilbert N. Haugen (R) of Iowa, relinquishes his deanship after 34 consecutive years in Congress. He is succeeded by a consecutive 16-term, Rep. Edward Pou (D) of North Carolina.

Casualties among the veterans in the House were numerous last November.

Third in seniority in the House stands Speaker John N. Garner, with fifteen consecutive terms. But he moves over into the Senate as Vice-President, which makes Rep. Henry T. Rainey (D) of Illinois, next to Pou in the new House with 14 terms.

Willie C. Hawley (R) of Oregon, co-author of the tariff act, Barton L. French of Idaho, and John M. Nelson (R) of Wisconsin, were 13-termers who went out in the November hurricane.

After March 4th, there will be only ten Senators left whose service dates back 20 years or more. There is Borah, Fletcher (D) of Florida, Smith (D) of South Carolina, Swanson (D) of Virginia, Ashurst (D) of Arizona, Hurman (D) of Nevada, Sheppard (D) of Texas, and three who took their seats on the day Woodrow Wilson was first inaugurated—Norris (R) of Nebraska, Robinson (D) of Arkansas, and Walsh (D) of Montana.

HULMEVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Davis, Philadelphia, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Vornhold, Sunday.

A few days' visit is being paid by Miss Lillian Goslin to relatives in Yardley.

The following last evening attended the leadership training class in Sunday School work at the Langhorne M. E. Church from the Hulmeville Methodist Sunday School: Misses Erda M. Schatt, Grace and Clara Illick, Elizabeth Foster; Mrs. E. W. Henry, Sr.; Mrs. Ashbel Buckman, Mrs. Edward Davis; Superintendent Jesse C. Everett, and pastor, T. W. Smith.

Hurdling Champ

Miss Evelyn Hall, of Chicago, Olympic star and co-holder of the world's record for the 80-meter hurdle, pictured as she topped the hurdle in the 50-meter event at the women's national indoor track meet in New York. Miss Hall won the event and added another laurel to her crown.

SYNOPSIS

Tom Leach, pirate terror of the Spanish Main, and the master of the dread "Black Swan," captures the merchant vessel "The Centaur," bound for England, and kills the captain and crew. Passengers aboard the "Centaur" are Priscilla Harradine, lovely, young daughter of the late Captain-General of the Leeward Isles, Major Sands, her father's elderly aide, who hopes to win her hand and fortune, and the handsome young Frenchman, Charles de Bernis, former lieutenant of the buccaneer, Henry Morgan. The latter reformed and is commissioned by the King of England to rid the seas of pirates. He has tried in vain to capture the elusive Leach. De Bernis, known to Leach of old, protects Priscilla by introducing her as his wife, and the Major, as his brother-in-law. He holds Leach at bay with a promise of great wealth in the form of a Spanish plate fleet scheduled to sail shortly. It is agreed that De Bernis will take command of the "Centaur" and lead Leach to the treasure. The pirate chief reluctantly agrees to De Bernis' suggestion that they career "The Black Swan," to put it in battle order for their coming encounter with the Spaniards. Leach holds his anger towards De Bernis in check waiting until the treasure is in his hands. Despite the fact that he owes his life to De Bernis, Major Sands is hostile towards the Frenchman, feeling superior to him. When Priscilla reprimands him for his apparent ingratitude, he explains it is due to his concern for her safety. To Priscilla's question as to why he became a buccaneer, De Bernis explains how the persecution of the Huguenots in France caused him to flee to Santa Catalina and join his uncle, Sieur Simon. Friendless, when his uncle was killed, he had no alternative but to join Morgan. "The Black Swan" is finally beached at Albuquerque Keys and the work of cleaning her hull begun. Leach and his men live in thatched huts on the shore, while De Bernis and his party stay aboard the "Centaur" at anchor nearby. Major Sands, ever intent to justify to Priscilla his scorn of De Bernis, takes him to task for fraternizing with the crew. De Bernis retorts that most things are done in life from sheer necessity.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

"Stab me! You may be right. That may be the general rule of life. I hadn't thought of it. But here, now, what necessity do you obey when you go amongst these fellows?"

"But isn't it plain? I am sure that Miss Priscilla understands me."

Calmly she met the gaze of his dark eyes. "I think I do. You obey the necessity of disposing them favourably towards you."

"And not merely towards me, but towards us all. Must I tell you that this Leach is a treacherous, headstrong, violent beast? Although I have associated myself with him, and although I believe that I hold him fast in the bonds of cupidity, yet I cannot be sure that perversity, stupidity, or the sheer evil that is in the fellow may not drive him to burst his bonds. Do not, therefore, turn the eye of scorn upon me because I am concerned to forge myself a buckler against the day of need. That buckler lies in winning the regard, even the affection, of these men."

The Major made a very face of disgust. "Affection!" he depreciated. "Stab me! There are some things that can be too dearly bought."

"You may be right. For myself, I am slow to reach conclusions in these matters. But there is a deal to which you may not have given attention. If there should be an end of me, Major, there will certainly be an end of you and of Miss Priscilla. You will include no illusion on that score among the many illusions from which I have observed you to suffer." He smiled upon the sudden utter blankness of the Major's countenance. "Be sparing, therefore, in your contempt of the means by which I ensure your preservation with my own from any of the accidents to which such a nature as Captain Leach's might expose it."

With that, and without awaiting any answer from Major Sands, he adroitly turned the conversation into other channels, addressing himself to Miss Priscilla whose eyes gleamed curiously as they now met his own. Almost, he could have supposed, she took satisfaction in the unanswerable rebuke which he had administered to the pompous soldier.

At about the same time and upon the very same topic, Wogan and Halliwell were entertaining Leach, who sat at dinner with them and with the fiery-faced Ellis and the quiet-mannered, peck-marked Bundry, in the log cabin that had been built for them.

Leach was not impressed at first. "What's the odds?" he growled. "Let him do as he likes until he brings us to the Spaniards. Then it'll be my turn, as he'll find out."

To Ellis and Bundry there was news in this dark hint; for unlike Wogan and Halliwell they were not yet in the Captain's confidence as to how he intended to square matters with de Bernis for his intransigence over the articles. There was a queer kindling in the furnace of Ellis's countenance. But Bundry's eyelids drooped slowly like the membrane of a bird, and his face, with its clay-coloured pallor upon which the ardour of the sun could make no impression, grew more like a mask than ever.

The corpulent Halliwell leaned forward across the table. He spoke quietly. "Can ye suppose, Cap'n, that possibility don't occur to him?"

"What if it do? He's here, isn't he? We've got him, haven't we? How's he to get away from us?"

Halliwell's little eyes were screwed up and almost disappeared into his bulging cheeks. "Come and put yourself into your hands, very trusting like, didn't he?" quoth his sly voice.

"Couldn't help his self as things fell out," Leach was still contemptuous.

"Just so," said Halliwell. "Just so. 'Twas in his mind, as he told ye, to ha' gone to Guadeloupe for a ship and men w' which to join us. But things fell out so as he didn't need to. It don't follow that he welcomes it, if he'd ha' joined us w' a ship o' his own arming, and men o' his own recruiting, he'd not be as helpless as he is now, would he? And ye're not supposing that Mossoo de Bernis of all men alive isn't awake to that and to what may happen to him?"

"Suppose he is. What, then? How the devil can he mend it?"

Impatiently Wogan flung into the discussion, so as to shed more light on the Captain's dullness.

"Och, now, don't ye see that's just what he may be trying to do?" Leach sat up as if he had been stung. Wogan elaborated.

"There he is aboard our ship w' a hundred stout lads, and us careened here, high and dry, and as helpless as if our hands was tied behind our backs. What for is he at such pains to be making friends with them? Putting a spell on them with tales of his brave doings as a cover, and howling Spanish ditties to them in the moonlight, like a love-sick tom-cat? Will ye trust him with them? Or them with him, if it comes to that? There's Ned and me might wake up to find we've had our throats cut in our sleep, and him sailing away with the ship and the lads to try their luck by themselves against the Spaniards and keep the treasure to their-selves. And you, Tom, careened here, with devil a ship in which to follow him and devil a notion which way to follow if ye had a ship."

"By heaven!" roared Leach, and came to his feet on the oath. It was as if a pit had suddenly yawned at his feet. What manner of trusting fool had he been not to have seen this danger for himself?

UPPER MORELAND TEAM IS SWAMPED BY BRISTOL

(B. H. S. Press Representative)

The strong Cardinal and Gray quintet traveled to Willow Grove last night, where they met the Purple and Yellow Upper Moreland five and there handed them an overwhelming defeat, the score being 44 to 13. The Bristol second team, however, met with defeat in a very close and exciting game. When the final whistle blew the score was 27 to 21.

This was the first time the Bristol team played in a cage where walls were counted in-bounds, and often the play was rough. On this new type of floor the Strangers were very successful, but the Strangler Juniors had some trouble.

Gaining the lead in the opening minutes of play the Bristol varsity were never headed by the Upper Morelanders. In the first quarter they were held scoreless and even in the second canto they didn't score a field goal, but only chalked up two fouls. The second team held the lead during the first three quarters but in the last stanza they were overhauled and defeated.

For the Strangers Bornice with seventeen points, took the scoring laurels, while Heins and Kerchner led the home team. Manzo and Corn, with eight and six points respectively, led the Bristol seconds while Randall led the Purple and Yellow seconds.

Expert Shows How

Giving the rookies of the team a practical demonstration in the art of making the ideal connection between the hickory and the ball, Bill Terry, manager and first baseman of the New York Giants, is shown during a practice workout at Los Angeles, Cal. merous approved biographies of the ex-kaiser are prominently displayed. Among these is a limited edition of a pictorial biography compiled and edited at Doorn Castle, and printed this year at Berlin. It is on sale only at this bazaar. The ex-kaiser's favorite photographs can be found within its covers, many snapped during his enforced stay at Doorn.

Of the numerous photos in the book, from babyhood to his tree-sawing days, he never once appears with a smile—always with a grim, firm-set mouth. There is a pathetic touch in the inclusion of one portrait of him seated on a bench alone with his dog, and dramatically captioned, "The Solitary Kaiser."

For a novelty there are books on other than imperial subjects, lace, novelty works, and porcelains from the ex-sovereign's own pottery.

The books were selected by Princess Hermine, and include a few English volumes such as "The Lindberghs," "The Third Mary Stuart," "With Lawrence in Arabia," "Lummo," P. G. Wodehouse and John Galsworthy.

Incidentally, for those who so desire, there are a few signed photographs of the Crown Prince at the bazaar counters.

(In tomorrow's article the daily routine of the former Kaiser at his Doorn estate is outlined in detail.)

Turf Highlights

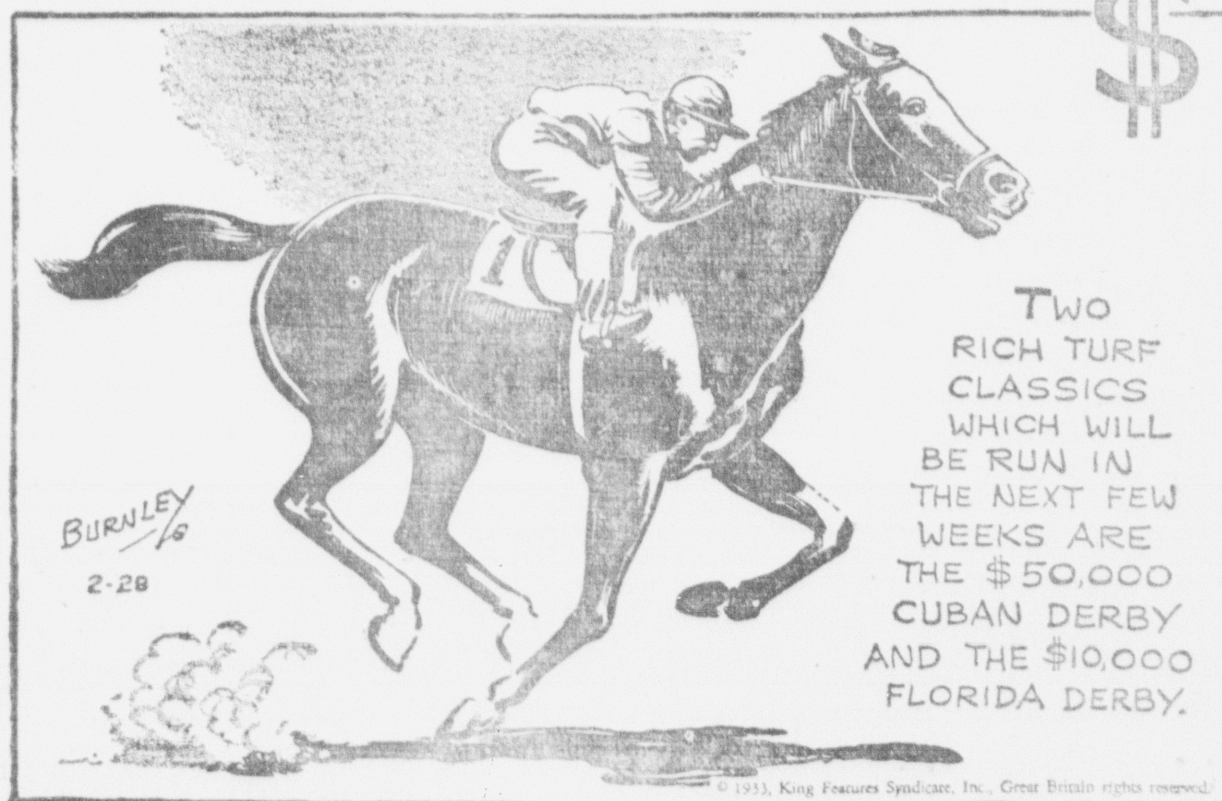

By BURNLEY

TWO YOUNG JOCKEYS WHO HAVE BEEN RIDING BRILLIANTLY ARE MONTE PARKE AT NEW ORLEANS AND LEE HUMPHRIES AT AGUA CALIENTE--

Johnny

GILBERT--THE KINGPIN RIDER OF 1932 IS KICKIN' 'EM HOME AT HIALEAH, WHERE COCCI AND MILLS, HIS RIVALS OF LAST YEAR, ARE ALSO RIDING---

TWO RICH TURF CLASSICS WHICH WILL BE RUN IN THE NEXT FEW WEEKS ARE THE $50,000 CUBAN DERBY AND THE $10,000 FLORIDA DERBY.

RACING in the Southland has been unusually successful this winter. The tracks are, of course, set in the very garden of Nature, and conditions are ideal for the sport of kings in the balmy climate. As far as horse racing is concerned, there is little evidence of hard times 'way down South.

At Hialeah, of course, we had the spectacle of the season, and one that will be remembered for a long time. The gala opening was attended by more than 15,000 turf fans, who poured into the unique and beautiful park in Miami, which the lavish hand of Joseph E. Widener had lifted from a less than mediocre track to the most gorgeous in the land.

Among the jockeys we find that Johnny Gilbert, the champion rider of 1932 is staying on top and kicking them home often enough to make it appear that he will retain the place he made for himself when he created a new record last year. The boys who pressed him for 1932 honors are right with him again—Hank Mills and Silvio Cocci, both phenomenal riders.

Two youngsters who are emulating Gilbert, Mills and Cocci are Monte Parke, riding at New Orleans, and Lee Humphries at Agua Caliente. Parke is a brother of Ivan Parke, star rider six or seven years ago. Humphries is only 16 years old and hails from Idaho, the state that produced the great Earle Sande. He skyrocketed to turfdom's attention by riding 32 winners in the first four weeks at Agua.

The two big winter classics are yet to come—the Florida Derby at Hialeah on March 11 and the $50,000 Cuban Derby at Oriental Park, Havana, on the following day.

An innovation in receiving nominations for the Florida Derby has done much to bring a fine bunch of starters to Hialeah for the closing day's classic. Supplementary nominations will be receivable up to tomorrow. Because of this, horsemen have the opportunity of judging their thoroughbreds through the season, instead of having to rely on early season showings.

The decision to take nominations until ten days before the race has been thoroughly approved by sportsmen, who feel that the decision brings a higher class field to the race.

It will pay you to read this one

THE other day a friend gave my wife a recipe for a new Frozen Orange Pudding. We had it last night for dessert.

"This is something new," I said. "Where did you get it?"

"Mae gave me the recipe yesterday. She clipped it from an advertisement."

My wife didn't read that advertisement. If her friend hadn't read it what a treat we would have missed.

Do you read the advertisements? It will pay you many times over to do so. From them you may learn about all sorts of new things. New foods, new ways to use them, new recipes that will add variety to the daily menu.

Right in the advertisements in this paper there are countless things to interest you, to save you money, to bring you the most value for what you spend. And now as a reward for reading this advertisement here is the recipe that inspired it.

RECIPE FOR FROZEN ORANGE PUDDING

Ingredients. 2 egg yolks (beaten); 1 cup orange juice; 1 cup cream (light cream of top milk will do); 4 teaspoonfuls flour; 1/8 teaspoonful salt; 1/3 cup sugar; 1 teaspoonful grated orange rind.

Blend thoroughly egg yolks, sugar, flour, salt and add orange juice and cream. Put in double boiler until thick. Add orange rind, cool and pour into freezing tray of refrigerator — or three or four hours on ice. When ready to serve, top each dish with meringue made by beating two egg whites stiff and adding 1/4 cup sugar. Garnish with orange segments.
